Background

Markus holds a Master's degree in education (University of Hamburg), has studied environmental management and geography (University of Southampton/Hamburg) and is certified as professional coach and workshop facilitator of the German Coaching Federation (dvct) as well as the Coaches Training Institute, one of the leading coach training organisations in the world.

Drawing on many years as an entrepreneur, educator, trainer, manager and coach, Markus uses a wide range of tools and concepts. He creates unique settings for intense learning and committed action. This includes his pioneering work in designing change management trainings for leaders that integrate practical exercises, reality simulations and knowledge inputs. Markus has delivered his leadership development workshops across Europe.

Markus supports leaders and their teams to work effectively and 'healthy' in complex and fast changing environments. In various cases, it was also Markus's speciality to consult executives and organisations in growth and fundamental changes.

As an entrepreneur, Markus has led Orange change- & project-management - an international consultancy with its Head Quarter in Hamburg, Germany.

Grown up in a family of biologists, Markus is well equipped to play a role in leading and inspiring colleagues and customers to face the challenges of the climate crisis. Markus cares deeply for his two children Lovis and Paula. On the broader level Markus advocates a sustainable lifestyle and supports selected leaders of non-profit organisations as coach pro bono.
